COMMENTS FROM THE TOWN MANAGER'S OFFICE

The work on Mason Street is moving along and the final results of the reconstruction are now showing. The crew finished hauling gravel the day that school started. There is still a lot of work to do around the catch basins, and manholes and driveways. Although the street is only thirty-three feet wide, the reconstructed street uses nearly all of the width so it is a big improvement over what it was before it was rebuilt. The finish grading is being done now but the people on the street should be aware that their driveways will be fixed after the street is shaped up.

When Mason Street is finished and tarred, the crew will start on the town road improvement for this year. The job off the Middle Intervale Road will probably be done first and the one off the Northwest Bethel Road will be done later.

The Planning Board meeting that was scheduled for last Thursday, the first Thursday of the month, was postponed until September 17, 1964. At that time the meeting will probably deal with the subjects of comprehensive planning, a mobile home ordinance, and our present zoning ordinance. Anyone interested in any of these subjects or any other subject related to municipal planning should plan to be at the meeting. The time for the meeting is 7:30 p. m. and the place is the selectmen's office.

About 15 people took the time to indicate an interest in the elm trees in Bethel. I'm sure that there are many more people interested in the shade trees in town. I feel sure that the interested people will see that extra money is raised next year for the care of our elm trees and they will attempt to get civic organizations to participate in planting programs.

OVER 12,000 ATTEND WEEK-END RACING

Stock car racing action reached an unprecedented high at the Oxford Plains Speedway over Labor Day Week End when some 12,500 fans turned out for the Saturday-Sunday night doubleheader.

Mixed with the excitement was the saddening emotion of the crowd when the announcer told them Assilel J. "Pat" Thibodeau had been killed while driving his yellow No. 7 midget on the second lap of the midget feature, Saturday night. Thibodeau attempted to make a pass on the outside of the track, hit a sand bank and his auto flipped 10 feet into the air. When it came down on its open cockpit. Thibodeau suffered a fractured neck, cerebral concussion and cerebral hemorrhage.

On the brighter side, Farmington's Ron Smith moved extremely close to first place in the point parade when he won both features. Official standings are not yet known. Bob Tibbetts of Norway is currently in first place. He finished second in Saturday's feature but was a long way out Sunday.

CHILD PEDESTRIAN SAFETY EMPHASIZED AS SCHOOLS REOPEN

With schools reopening for the fall term, the Maine State Police emphasized the importance of child pedestrian safety.

"When we speak of children in traffic," observed the police group, "each of us must accept —without any reservation—the fact that he must be 'his brother's keeper'."

The enforcement organization pointed out that children, by their very nature, are excitable, careless, forgetful, and unthinking.

"Although we adults realize this," they continued, "many of us seem to expect these youngsters to exercise mature judgement and to have a thorough knowledge of speed and stopping distances."

They reminded drivers that these junior citizens live in a world that is part dreams and part reality. Often they, find it difficult to distinguish between the two.

"Entranced by this dream-world, youngsters may forget their safety training, added the police. "When this occurs, their carelessness frequently leads them into danger. At such times, unusual alertness and caution on the part of drivers is their best insurance against death or serious injury."

Pointing out that parental teaching and good example are tremendously important in child safety training, the police concluded:

"Although we realize that children are inexperienced and that they are inclined to forget safety rules, we can help them to be self-reliant in traffic, to avoid traffic difficulties, and to accept responsibility for their own safety by our conscientious teaching and by setting a good example as pedestrians. As parents and as responsible adults, our teaching and our example walking in traffic are vital factors, the importance of which cannot be over-emphasized. All adults, therefore, have parts to play in this child pedestrian safety program—as drivers, as parents, or just as grown-up pedestrians.

"Each and every one of us much accept his responsibility for keeping the youngsters safe in traffic."

Gail Cleveland captured the fun-filled powder puff derby Sunday night. The Norway lass won over a 13 car field with 5,100 spectators screaming their approval. A demolition derby with Thunder Road, Vt., will be next Saturday's feature.

Winston Churchill once said: "If you will not fight for right when . . . your victory will be sure and not too costly; you may come to the moment when you will have to fight with all the odds against you and only a precarious chance of survival."

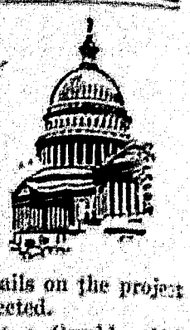
CAPITOL COMMENTS

CONGRESSMAN

CLIFFORD G. McINTIRE

MAINE, SECOND DISTRICT



Quoddy: As the 88th Congress moves steadily toward its end, so do the prospects for this year's advancement of legislation providing for the establishment of a Quoddy Tidal Power Project. This disturbs me, because I had high hopes when I introduced Quoddy legislation in February, 1964,—this legislation being based on favorable recommendations contained in a Department of Interior report of 1963.

There has been, of course, ample opportunity for some legislative progress to be made on the Quoddy bill; Congress has been in session quite regularly all this year and is eminently equipped to hold hearings on the Passamaquoddy bills.

Customarily, however, Congressional hearings are based on reports issued by the Departments concerned with the legislation—in this case, the Department of the Interior. However(no such Quoddy report has been forthcoming. Instead, the Department submitted a report supplemental to its 1963 recommendation. This did little good for the cause of Quoddy, because it was a technical report and did not constitute a formal report from the Department of the Interior.

It is also disconcerting to note that about four years have slipped by without any effort being made to engage the Canadians in negotiations regarding the development of this international power project. When I asked Secretary of the Interior Udall about this, he informed me that nothing in this respect had been done and to date only an interchange of some technical details on the project had been effected.

How about a Quoddy tidal power project, then? Will we have to wait for the tidal project's fortunes to rise, say in 1966, 1968, 1970, etc.—years that are characterized by the running of the political tides?

Textile Tariffs: Just before the House of Representatives recessed, it passed a bill designed to make certain adjutments and corrections in the Tariff Schedules of the United States. The bill contained an item of interest to the Maine textile industry—an adjustment of tariff rates to prevent low-grade fabrics of wool from coming into America at reduced tariff rates.

As the tariff schedules now operate, reduced tariff rates are provided for certain classes of textile products that are in some portion made up of laces, braids, embroidery, trimmings, and tuckings. Exporters of low-grade wool fabrics avoid high duty rates by tacking a small piece of ornamentation onto the wool garment, thereby having it qualify for the reduced rate.

The bill passed by the House corrects this by providing that in the case of ornamented fabrics, the rate of duty shall not be less than the rate which would apply to such fabrics if they were not ornamented. This adjustment will offer some protection for our Maine textile industry against low-duty imports.

POND RECLAMATION HEARING HELD

The Fish and Game Department held a public hearing in Phillips Tuesday, to consider the reclaiming of Long Cove Pond. The meeting was held at the Phillips Selectmen's office.

The hearing also considered new regulations for the pond under consideration. It is required that reclaimed ponds be closed to ice fishing, that the use or possession of live fish as bait be prohibited, and that a daily limit of five trout be imposed. Chemical reclamation is a means of removing undesirable fish which have over-run a pond and are competing with the desirable game fish. After reclamation the pond is re-stocked with trout.

The undesirable competing fish are removed by treating the pond with chemical rotenone. In the concentrations used, rotenone is not harmful to humans or warm-blooded animal life in any way.

More than 100 ponds have been reclaimed in Maine to date. Returns to fishermen are much greater in reclaimed ponds than in those containing large numbers of competing fish.

No ponds will be reclaimed where local opposition is found to be present. Unanimous support is required for reclaiming ponds for trout fishing.

BEAVER CREATING WATERFOWL MARSHES

Game biologists of the Maine Fish and Game Dept. are studying the possibility that one simple operation might solve two big problems.

For the past two years, Regional Biologist Harold M. Blanchard and Biology Aide Myron S. Smart have been live-trapping and removing beaver from areas where they are a nuisance to man. These beaver are then released at selected sites where their dam-building activities will create much-needed waterfowl marshes and where the animals will no longer be nuisances.

At present, there are 42 active waterfowl marshes in Maine which have been created by transplanted beaver. The average size of these marshes is 25 acres.

Relocating beaver with the specific intention of creating waterfowl marshes is a game management technique which should prove to be a very effective method of providing low-cost waterfowl habitat.

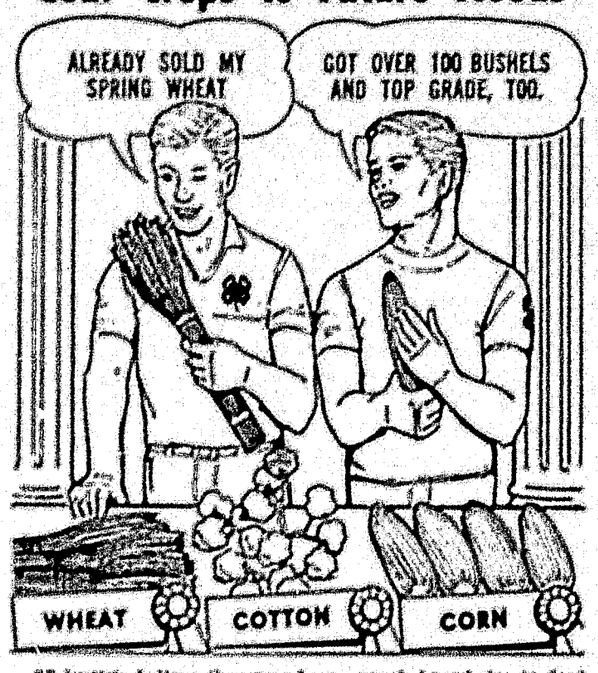
Gear Crops to Future Needs



"Scientists believe they now have enough knowledge to feed twice the number of people that inhabit the world today. But scientists with this knowledge produce very little food," a University of Illinois agricultural economist told a 4-H group.

It's the farmers who need this information, L. H. Simerl pointed out. As a matter of fact, he said, "even the highly efficient American farmers produced just enough to keep pace with the population growth during the last half century."

4 Billion Must Eat

The education of youth, satisfying jobs and conservation of soil, water and mineral resources he cited as challenging problems of our time. By the year 2000—a little more than one generation away—six billion people will inhabit the earth. Said Simerl, "That's about twice as many as we are capable to feed adequately."

The Cooperative Extension Service is educating one segment of the nation's farm youth through the national 4-H field crops program. The 4-H'er obtains information and guidance to aid him in improving quality and quantity of crops and land.

Scores of examples could be given where 4-H members have led the way to use of better practices by an entire farming community. Public demonstrations and exhibits are also presented.

4-H'ers Help Produce

One hundred-bushel-per-acre corn clubs are not unusual in 4-H. Test plots of grains, experiments with fertilizers and chemicals, conservation, insect control, harvesting and marketing are some of the areas undertaken or explored. Club members also learn to use farm machinery and labor efficiently.

For the 10th year, the program sponsor, Arcadian Products Department of Allied Chemical Corporation, provides annual awards to county, state and national winners.

This fall six young farmers will get $500 scholarships when they are named national winners. Top ranking member in the state will be a delegate to the National 4-H Club Congress, and a guest of the sponsor.

BETHEL PLAYERS TO MEET TUESDAY

Mrs Warren Hastings, membership president of the Bethel players has announced that the first meeting of the season has been scheduled for Tuesday, September 15, at 8:00 p. m., at the Bethel community Room. Mrs James Hudson will be in charge of the refreshment committee. All members and interested guests are invited to attend.

A generous donation from Chapin's Mobil Station has boosted the Bethel Community Center Fund to $1772.50. Bethel Players extend sincere thanks to Mr. Chapin, and remind all interested contributors that the fund raising drive is still in progress. Donations may be sent to Mrs. Richard Bryant, treasurer, Bethel Players, for deposit in this fund.
